Again We Say

ALL LIFE BUT ONE CREATURE

Component Parts Are Merely Individual Cells, According to Argument of Samuel Butler.

Samuel Butler argues that, as automatic expertness in piano playing proves previous practice, so also does the immediate expertness in pecking of a newly hatched chick. To the question of personal identity; and again. This brings up the whole question of personal identity; and Butler deals with it. We say that an octogenarian is the same "person" as he was when an infant; yet there is no identity of matter. Nor does personality depend upon any consciousness or sense of such personality; it is not likely that the moth remembers having been a caterpillar, any more than we remember having been children of a day old. And if the octogenarian is the infant of eighty years ago he is also the foetus of a few months before, and—chasing him still further back—he is identical with his parents. This "involves the probable unity of all animal and vegetable life, as being, in reality, nothing but one single creature, of which the component members are but, as it were, blood corpuscles or individual cells," which would fit in rather well with the similar argumentation of Fechner.

STREET HIRED FOR THE DAY

Indignant Citizen Found He Could Not Interrupt Work of Moving Picture Company.

Recently a moving picture company secured permission to use a real city street for one of their "street scenes." While their actors were busy a man came along and was told that he could walk up the street while the acting was going on.

He immediately threw off his disguise of a mild-mannered passer-by and became an American Citizen.

He declared that nobody had any right to stop him. The representatives of the picture company were firm.

"Well, I'll leave it to a policeman," roared the Citizen, and he hustled over to a bluecoat who was standing near by.

"Can I or can I not pass along that street?" he inquired.

"You can NOT," said the policeman. "That street has been hired for the day. Get off of it. Get a move on. Beat it."

Much crestfallen, the Citizen obeyed, went up another street, and was heard no more.

And the policeman, getting his cue, hurried into the middle of the street to take his part in the "show" and receive the congratulations of his fellow-actors.

NOBODY WAS BEING KILLED

Chambermaid Was Unduly Alarmed at Strange Sounds Coming From Hotel Room.

Taking parrots into the house is against the rules at the Manhattan, but yesterday when a large Canadian family with a cage arrived from a ship and the head of it said they wanted a suite of rooms merely for the day, as they were leaving for home at night, Beau Brummel Hill, the room clerk, who was smiling with the day, said he thought Polly might be accommodated just for the time.

Polly's cage was hung up in a window on the Forty-third street side of the building and the family went out shopping. An hour or so later the chambermaid on duty about those parts rushed to a telephone and called up the housekeeper.

"Somebody's been murdered in a room up here!" she cried. "One man's groaning somethin' fearful and is yellin' 'Help! Help!' an' I'm afraid to open the door." The chambermaid was advised to go back and unlock the door, and by the time she got there the noise had ceased. Looking in, she saw the parrot and understood.—New York Sun.

VERDICT OF SCIENTIST.

Clement Wragge, who has inspected what are known as the "tattooed rocks" on the coast near Raglan, New Zealand, is distinctly of opinion that they are the work of neither Tamil nor Maori, but are the inscriptions of a very ancient race of sun worship people, antedating the advent of the Maori by untold centuries. The spiral circle, ovals, crosses and squares, he says, are most significant, and confirm his opinion that New Zealand has been inhabited by early man. He considers the inscriptions are probably connected with those at Easter Island and Central and South America, and are Atlantean or Lemurian in origin; further, that the Maori copied the spiral from the relics of ancient people, and did not initiate it.

PROLIFIC FISH.

Fishes have no call to blush when Colonel Roosevelt declaims against race suicide. Lewenhock, a great naturalist, who lived years ago, is authority for the statement that the cod spawns about nine million in a season. He adds that the flounder usually produces more than one million, and the mackerel more than five million. If Mr. and Mrs. Cod and Mr. and Mrs. Mackerel were to issue invitations for a family reunion it would mean something. There are more than one thousand varieties of fish, and not one of them, if Lewenhock be right, has cause to fear the reproach of Roosevelt.

NO NEED TO ASK.

"Does your wife ask you for things she knows you cannot afford?"

"She hasn't asked me for a thing since we were married."

"Great! How do you manage it?"

"When she wants a thing she does not ask me; she tells me."

MAKING LIGHT OF HER YEARS.

Marie Dressler was inviting her friends to a birthday party.

"There'll be a birthday cake, I suppose," some one remarked.

"Yes, there'll be a cake, never fear," was the reply.

"And candles, of course?" went on the alleged wit.

"My friend," said Miss Dressler, "this is to be a birthday party, not a torchlight procession."
